Translation

Nurse: Hello?

Investigator: Hi.

Nurse: Hi. Hello! This is the Third Inpatient Service Section.

Investigator: Is this the Liver Transplant Inpatient Service?

Nurse: Oh. How can I help you?

Investigator: Because I have a patient who needs a liver transplant, I plan to send him to your hospital. Do you do many liver transplants? Can we go there now?

Nurse: Ah, we do a lot now.

Investigator: Now, if we go to your hospital now, how long shall we wait before getting it done?

Nurse: No. We have something special, we need to do a preoperative assessment for a liver transplant.

Investigator: Which doctor should we register to make an appointment with? So I can contact him.

Nurse: Eh. We have a physician surnamed Wang. You can make a phone call tomorrow morning. He is on duty tomorrow.

Investigator: I want to have a consultation before sending the patient over. Are we still doing a lot of liver transplants now?

Nurse: Oh, yeah. Roughly over 100 a year.

Investigator: You mean you did over 100 transplants last year?

Nurse: Yeah.

Investigator: Oh, Just over 100, not too many. I was wondering if you've already started doing it since the New Year's holidays were just over?

Nurse: Oh, we have nothing to do with holidays.

Investigator: Have nothing to do huh? What's the total fee of a liver transplant?

Nurse: Ah, 400,000 yuan.

Investigator: Oh, it's 400,000 yuan! That's higher than before.

Nurse: Yeah. Tomorrow morning...this is the phone number of our nurses' station and he will probably be at work at 8:30 am.

Investigator: Now which director is doing it, the liver transplantation?

Nurse: Oh, Professor Wang, Wang Bo. Now all professors are doing it. It's not just a matter of who's doing it. He is mainly in charge of it, Wang Bo.

Investigator: Oh, Wang Bo, Wang Bo. I know, I know. Well, you sounded like you do liver transplants almost every week? Or every day?

Nurse: Yeah, yeah, yeah.

Investigator: Every week?

Nurse: Every week, not every day. Maybe two or three a day, or maybe just once a week. It's hard to say.

Investigator: Then how about the donors? Do you have a lot?

Nurse: This is just the nurses' station. If you want to know more, you need to contact their people.

Investigator: Oh, okay. Then I'll call them, call them during the daytime tomorrow.

Nurse: Yes, after eight o'clock.

Investigator: Okay, thank you!
