Translation

Investigator: Hello!

Nurse: Hello!

Investigator: Hi. How are you? Is this the hepatobiliary surgery inpatient service of the People's Hospital of Xinjiang Autonomous Region?

Nurse: Ah, yes.

Investigator: My relative is doing business over there in your area, and he was diagnosed with advanced cirrhosis some time ago. I would like to have a consultation, and afterwards get him transferred to your hospital for a liver transplant.

Nurse: When will you come?

Investigator: I don't know yet.

Nurse: Come to our center at 9:30 am the day after tomorrow, and no need to register first.

Investigator: Should I come to the center at 9 am the day after tomorrow?

Nurse: At 9:30 am, please come to our center, come to the Hepatobiliary Surgery on the third floor of the general building, and consult with a doctor.

Investigator: Whom should I look for? Which doctor should I ask for?

Nurse: You could come to the doctors' office and find a doctor. Any doctor there will do.

Investigator: Simply come?

Guardian: Just come, right. It should be fine. The doctors will be at work at 9:30 am. A doctor will check to see if your patient is a good candidate for the surgery.

Investigator: Right. I would like to ask, if we come get onto the waiting list at your hospital, can it be done in one month or half a month?

Nurse: You won't be able to know that until you come over.

Investigator: Well, as you've been working at the inpatient service, have you ever experienced such cases where the surgeries were done in just a month or a half month?

Nurse: That's difficult to say. That can happen if there is a liver source. A patient must wait if there is no liver source available.

Investigator: Do I need to transfer the patient over and get him admitted in your hospital while waiting? Or do we wait outside? Do you have a lot of beds?

Nurse: You should wait outside of the hospital.

Investigator: We need to wait outside of the hospital until a liver organ becomes available...?

Nurse: Wait outside of the hospital, and get registered here. Then we will call you if there are any changes, yes.

Investigator: Does your hospital do a lot? What about the surgeon's techniques? My family members are quite concerned about those issues such as the postoperative complications or infections?

Nurse: In the two cases we performed previously, they need to come back for a follow-up visit once a while. They have been taking the prescribed anti-rejection drugs and so on, and have to take them for life. They will have to come back often to keep up with their follow-up visits, and to keep getting prescription drugs.

Investigator: Ah. One of our neighbors recommended a doctor named Kong. Is he your director?

Nursing: He has retired, and now he is hired back to work at the clinic. He usually doesn't conduct surgeries.

Investigator: Oh, Doctor Kong is retired and no longer performs the surgeries. Who conducts them now? Could you give me a name?

Nurse: Our director performs that.

Investigator: What's your director's name?

Nurse: You prefer to speed up the process. You have your preferences, but this thing depends on the actual situation.

Investigator: Okay, I understand. Could you tell me about the lead surgeon?

Nurse: Are you coming the day after tomorrow?

Investigator: Yes. We will come at 9:30 am, the day after tomorrow.

Nurse: Ah, in that case, you can consult with our director, Director Chen Xiong.

Investigator: Director Chen, his name is Chen Xiong?

Nurse: Ah, right.

Investigator: Oh, at 9:30 am, I will see him (Nurse: yes, yes, okay). How are his technical skills? Is he the lead surgeon here? Is there any problem with his techniques?

Nurse: No problem!

Investigator: Great, perfect.

Nurse: Come with the patient together. The director will arrange it for you after you come. And register your various information, and someone from us will contact you afterwards.

Investigator: Oh, once a liver organ is available, it will be fast, right?

Nurse: You come here first, you come here to register first. How could we contact you if we don't have your information?

Investigator: Okay, thank you!

Nurse: Okay, okay.

Investigator: Okay, bye!

Nurse: Sure.
