Doctor Guo Xuekun of Kidney Transplantation, the Third Affiliated Hospital of Sun Yat-sen University, Guangzhou

2016-01-09 (+86-13580325531)

Nightlights:

1. We are still doing it. One case was done on the day the phone call was made.
2. A total of seven kidney transplants were done in nine days January 1 through 9.
3. Donations are local, and the doctors who perform liver transplants pick the donated organs.

Telephone recording snippet:

Investigator: Is this Dr. Guo? I am a family member of a patient. Do you still perform kidney transplant operations there?

Doctor: Yes, we do.

Investigator: Will the patient have to wait for long once there?

Doctor: There is no uniform standard for this.

Investigator: How many cases have you done this year?

Doctor: This year? 2016? Six cases were done the day before yesterday, and one case was done today, (total) seven cases.

Investigator: The waiting time is ok. Is the donor source local or out of town?

Doctor: Of course it's local, but there're out of town ones too. Such systems exist everywhere.

Investigator: Oh, so you don't need to get them from other places, you get them from the local area, right?

Investigator: The doctor will take the organ himself, or...

Doctor: No, no, no, no, no, no! Those who perform liver transplants will go get them, and we are not involved.

Investigator: There are those who specifically do this, right?

doctor: Right.
