Doctor: Hey, Hello.

Investigator: Hey, hello, hello! Are you the Dr. Liu of the Beijing Friendship Hospital? Are you Liu Junshan?

Doctor: No, he did not come today.

Investigator: He doesn't work today?

Doctor: Also, and even if he does come, usually off work at this time.

Investigator: Off work! I have a nephew who is going to undergo liver transplantation. I think, think, are there many patients waiting here now? Just, just do a liver transplant.

Doctor: For these specific questions, you really have to contact Dr. Liu, but he does not work on Saturdays and Sundays, so you have to call on Mondays.

Investigator: Is he the doctor of your department?

Doctor: That's right, but for this matter, whether it's an appointment or anything, I always look to him.

Investigator: After making an appointment, I will find him, and I am making this call in first, and I just want to ask if we are doing it now? If does, are there many people in line? It is for the transplantation.

Doctor: A lot! The question is what is your definition of this much?

Investigator: Oh, I just want to say for us, like us this liver transplantation. I know that because others all come here, more come to here, and it may be more than that, that~

Doctor: If, if measured by the whole country or Beijing and compare with Beijing, we have indeed done a lot!

Investigator: How many liver transplants can we do this year? Is it more than the Armed Police Hospital? Last time they told me do more than the Armed Police.

Doctor: Oh~? I really don't know. Oh ~ no, not so much! As of now, it should be one hundred and twenty-three, more than one hundred and thirty.

Investigator: Oh, more than two hundred in a year is about the same?

Doctor: Should not, not that much!

Investigator: It's more than two hundred, right? Less than three hundred?
