Investigator: Then let me ask you, if all the tests are acceptable to have a surgery, how soon can it be arranged?

Jian ZHOU: It depends on the blood type, and his, how sick he is, how serious his condition is, as judged by the results of comprehensive clinical exams and tests, uh, okay?

Investigator: Well, do you think a surgery can be arranged in a month and a half?

Jian ZHOU: When he comes to see me, I will find out how sick he is, then make the arrangement accordingly, okay? Ahh, ok.

Investigator: Since your hospital is relatively large, your source of organs should also be fairly good.

Jian ZHOU: Yes, yes, yes. Transplant surgeries in Beijing are also quite good- transplants in Beijing in your city are pretty well-done too.

Investigator: Problem is this-if he travels from Shanghai to Beijing, as you know, a lot of his family will have to leave home and travel (to Beijing).

Jian ZHOU: The patient... the patient is from Shanghai, right?

Investigator: Yes, the patient is in Shanghai, yes.

Jian ZHOU: Oh I see, then that's okay, that's okay, okay, how about you ask him to see at my outpatient clinic, okay, I'll see him at my outpatient clinic, okay, okay, definitely will give it a try! We will give it a try! Ah ok, ok.

Investigator: Good.

Jian ZHOU: Okay then, that'll be it.
